Cumulus clouds at the airport in Cuzco, Peru.

Looking south at cumulus congestus (right) with cumulonimbus over Coricancha in Cuzco.
Stratocumulus and nimbostratus over dry lake bed at Pilkallacta ruins.

Cumulus and stratocumulus over Tipon with “flatirons” in background.
Stratus, stratocumulus, and cumulus clouds in a deep blue sky over Tipon.

Stratus and stratocumulus over rural Cuzco.
Stratocumulus, altostratus, and altocumulus over rural Cuzco.

Cumulus, stratus, altostratus, altocumulus, cirrostratus, cirrocumulus, and cumulonimbus from Saqsayhwaman over Cuzco with Blanco Christo in mid-background.
Cirrus, cirrostratus, cirrocumulus, altostratus, and altocumulus in a deep blue sky over a roche moutonnee and glacial striations at Saqsayhwaman above Cuzco.

Stratus and stratocumulus over extreme glacial striations near Saqsayhwaman near Cuzco.
Low hanging stratocumulus at Pisak.

Stratus clouds over rock quarry in background on other side of valley where the 90 ton pink granite stone was extracted. This at Ollantaytambo.
Stratus clouds near Moray.

Cumulus congestus, stratus, and cumulonimbus at Moray.
Stratus clouds over the Urubamba River between granitic domes at Aguas Calientes.

Stratocumulus over granitic domes from Machu Picchu.
Stratocumulus between granitic domes over Urabamba River valley.

Altostratus clouds above imperial Inca stonework at Machu Picchu. Note the integration of the natural granitic dome and the stonework for a perfect fusion of natural and man-made elements.
Altostratus and altocumulus over Machu Picchu with Huayna Picchu Mountain in the background. Machu Picchu is a graben structure between two faults in a granitic batholith.

Stratocumulus, stratus, and altostratus clouds in a deep blue sky over quarry at Machu Picchu. The Guard House is slightly obscured at left.
Altostratus and cirrus clouds in a deep blue sky over the Inca terraces of Machu Picchu with Machu Picchu Mountain partially visible through the mist.

Cumulonimbus and nimbostratus visible from Inca Rail over glacier (upper right) in Andes in the Sacred Valley along the Urubamba River between Aguas Calientes and Ollantaytambo.
Immortalized display of affection sea side under a clear blue sky in Lima, Peru.

Sunset with altocumulus clouds over the Isla San Lorenzo from Miraflores in Lima.