Beautiful People

Matt Simon
A woman selling food at the market in Cusco
A parade through the city of Cusco. The dancers were wearing very ornate and colorful clothing.
Two women singing and a man playing guitar from the Sencca Quispihuara community. They were very generous and fed us corn. We started horseback riding here.
A woman dressed in traditional garb, standing with an alpaca. This was at the Saqsaywaman Inca site.
A very talented artist. He sold his work at a store which showed us how they make silver jewelry and alpaca clothing.
The undergrad group at Tipon Inca site.
A man preparing the Peruvian delicacy guinea pig.
A woman spinning alpaca wool that was dyed using a spore that grows on cacti.
A woman selling many different handmade goods.
A boy selling some finger puppets and pencils.
Policia in the city of Lima.
A show we were privileged to see in Cusco. It showcased the traditional music and dances of the region.
A band playing on the streets of the town Aqua Caliente. They were very talented. This town is near the base of Machu Picchu.
A group of people at the top of an Inca site in Ollantaytambo.
A woman selling prickly pear, the fruit of a cactus, outside of the market in Cusco.
A look down a street in Cusco.