Some kids help out their parents by tending to the animals, but they also like to dance and play games.
The most popular sport in Peru: Fútbol!
Some people work as vendors selling food on the side of the roads, sweets for holidays, or selling trinkets to tourists.
Others work in construction or as farmers. Peruvian farmers grow crops such as potatoes and maize, but more recently have begun growing more coca leaves.
Peruvians take wool from sheep, alpacas, and other camelids and dye it to create textiles. These are then used to make things from blankets to sweaters.
Peruvian folk dancing accompanied by traditional music.
